Backstory

What drove me to become a professional recruiter has a lot to do with creative connectivity. I've always been drawn to the electric synergy between Client and Agency, between Creative Director and Designer, between Art Director and Copy Writer, between PR Firm and Company Owner and so on. When the match is right, the work speaks for itself and it all flows. Getting to that place, however, is not always easy.

After many years of working within the creative industry, I became increasingly more interested in the process of building creative teams. My firsthand knowledge of the creative industry, as well as my eye for spotting talent, saves my clients both time and money because I bring them only the best matches.
